Justine R. Gray is an associate who practices in the areas of general liability defense, New York Labor Law litigation, premises liability defense, municipal law, and construction site accident lawsuits. She defends building owners, commercial establishments, contractors, sub-contractors, management companies and public corporations in all aspects of litigation. Justine prides herself in proactive, fervent defense of her clients in New York City's five boroughs, Long Island, Westchester, and upstate counties.

Prior to joining Fullerton Beck LLP, Justine served as Senior Counsel with the New York City Law Department, Bronx Tort Division. She defended the City of New York, and its agencies, against personal injury and property damage lawsuits. Her responsibilities as Senior Counsel included managing and litigating all aspects of a wide variety of cases concerning civil rights, intentional torts, negligent supervision, motor vehicle accidents, premises liability, and labor law claims from commencement through resolution. Justine received a Division Chief Award in 2018 for outstanding performance.

Justine earned her Law Degree from Pace University School of Law in 2013 and started her career in civil litigation at a small firm representing and defending businesses and individuals. In this position, Justine was responsible for every aspect of litigating a civil claim including intake, commencement, discovery, settlement, mediation and trial in Supreme and Federal Courts.

Justine is also admitted to practice in the Eastern and Southern District Courts of New York.
